Memories that stay with You

*Emilie Lajoie
General Director*

I remember... Not the motto written on our license plates, whose meaning has sadly faded over time, but rather those memories, those scents, those first encounters that never leave us once they've taken root in our hearts.

I remember the very first time I came here, to L'Isle-aux-Coudres. It was a weekend in November 2014. Sitting in the white Toyota Corolla of that "kid from the Isle" who was taking me to meet his family for the first time, I looked up at the dark sky of that Friday night and saw the majestic mountains wrapping themselves around an island I had yet to discover.

I remember the fresh air I breathed in deeply as I walked along the deck of the ferry carrying us from one shore to the other. That strange feeling of having left behind, on the shore of Saint-Joseph-de-la-Rive, a kind of pressure I had grown used to—as a girl from the city.

I clearly remember the image of a woman, standing at the window of one of the houses around the island, nervously twisting a strand of her hair as she impatiently waited for her son to arrive.

I remember the comforting smell of the gourgane soup she had prepared for our arrival, and the abundance of food she had laid out on the table... "just in case," she had said.

That weekend, I felt like it was Halloween. I walked into a dozen homes, one after another. But instead of candy, I was offered gin and tonics, stories, and that warm, legendary welcome that defines the Isle. I met one person, then another—the son of someone, the daughter of someone else. I remember being both amused and fascinated by the nicknames people used here. I tried to follow the conversations—"oh yeah! Ti-Coune, son of Ti-Chose!" and "ahh! what a dreamer!"

The recipe for gourgane soup can be found on page 35.

I remember being completely charmed by these exchanges, by this colourful way of speaking I later came to call "chouenner."

I remember when Jos (that "kid from the Isle") told me we were going to visit Mamie, and how unsure I felt as he led me through the aisles of the village grocery store—until, behind a massive beer fridge, like a secret door, Mamie's home suddenly appeared.

I remember the hundreds of mobiles hanging from the ceiling, chiming softly behind my head as I brushed past them. I remember catching sight of Mamie, her hand resting on her cheek, gently rocking, and watching her wide smile spread as she saw her Jos arrive.

I remember the many grocery store employees coming in and out of her personal kitchen, stopping by for lunch or simply to say hello. And I remember how every single one of them called her "Mamie"... as if she were the grandmother of the entire Isle. I remember my first New Year's Day here, a few weeks later. Those incredible talents who, for the length of a performance, introduced me to their traditions, their roots.

I remember feeling like crying when people in the bar began to jig and perform a "plongeuse." I remember feeling clumsy, but so incredibly happy to be spinning among them.

If someone had told me then that, 11 years later, I would have the immense privilege of becoming the General Director of Tourisme Isle-aux-Coudres... that I would work every day with these Marsouins, these entrepreneurs and artisans who are so passionate and deeply human...

If someone had told me that the woman who was twisting a strand of her hair at her window that November night in 2014, waiting for her son, would be rocking my daughter to sleep a decade later... that the woman everyone called "Mamie" would, over the years, become a little bit mine too... and that this island, which I didn't yet know, would become my home, my place to return to...

If someone had told me all that... I would have believed them.

Because that night in November, on the ferry, between those majestic mountains that seemed to embrace the Isle, I felt—for the very first time in my life—that I was arriving home.

To you reading these words, thank you for choosing our island to weave your own vacation memories, memories that, I'm sure, will stay with you for a long time.

Words from here Our expressions

Colorful expressions and vivid verbs a way all their own of telling stories and keeping up with one another. A way of speaking that carries the Island's history and traditions through words. Here, people speak "marsouin." Here are a few words that tell its story, described by those who live it.

Le coudrier

"If Cartier had seen something else... we might be called something else today!"

"The wind can talk to it as loudly as it wants... the coudrier listens and keeps on growing anyway!"

"Tourists ask me if the coudrier can predict the weather... maybe it can—but we've got the Internet now!"

"If it grows here, it means it can handle it!"

Bla bla bla

Les marsouins

"A Marsouin? Well... that's us!"

"We were born surrounded by water... it shapes who we are."

"A Marsouin might leave... but always comes back."

"We're not perfect... but we're from here!"

"Marsouin? It means we know who your grandfather is."

"There are Marsouins by adoption... we recognize them, but we keep them anyway."

"A Marsouin by adoption? It means you've been here long enough that we still know who your grandfather is!"

Chouenner

"We're not chouennering... we're just being precise!"

"Chouenner means talking long enough for it to become interesting."

"It's not gossip... it's community information."

"Chouenner? Well... it's kind of what we're doing right now."

"For all that, I wouldn't dare confine it to a single definition. Suffice it to say, for those willing to hear it, that it encompasses every form of spoken language, from simple boasting to any eloquent way of speaking wonders."

— Pierre Perreault

La Mi-Carême

"You can hide your face, but not the way you dance!"

"We know it's someone we know... but sometimes, we guess wrong."

"The best part isn't guessing... it's watching them go!"

"It wasn't for Mi-Carême... the joy of Mi-Carême... it was to go see the girls!!! Wherever there weren't any girls, we didn't stay long... we went to every house!!!"

Step into the story

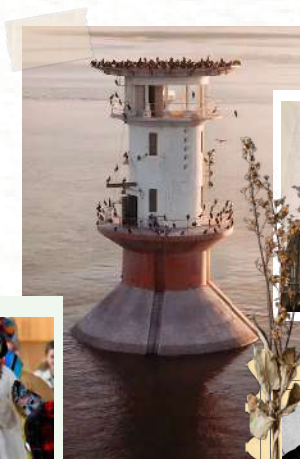

Step into the story

This year, the heritage circuit is getting a fresh new look. L'Isle-aux-Coudres is more than just a backdrop. It's an island shaped by the river, by traditions, and by the generations who have lived here.

All around the Isle, stop at the different interpretation panels and let yourself be told the stories of past trades, local celebrations, our roots, and the moments that have shaped both the island and the people who live here.

A digital experience accompanies the route: scan, listen, explore!
The story is there yours to discover.

The Road to Happiness

One of the greatest joys here, on L'Isle-aux-Coudres, is circling the island and taking in the scenery. Some do it on foot, like the pilgrims of the Compostelle walk, who kick off the season in early May in their hiking boots. Others choose to run it during L'Échappée, in mid-June. Some drive it, and many choose to discover the island by bike. So that everyone can fully enjoy their "tournette" (a local way of saying a loop around the island), we invite you to share the road with safety, courtesy, and respect. Signal your intentions, keep to the right, and yield when necessary.

Smile and let's all enjoy these 23 kilometres together.

Alexandra and Alexandre don't know each other and have absolutely nothing in common. They don't go to the same places, don't share the same habits, and live very different lives.

Looking for a change of scenery, each decides to treat themselves to a sunny weekend in the Caribbean... alone. But a booking mistake forces them to share the same bungalow. What was supposed to be a peaceful getaway quickly turns into an awkward cohabitation full of misunderstandings, mix-ups, and unexpected situations.

Charlotte! Atelier-Boutique

A real favorite for her clothing line!

9 ateliercharlotte.com
418-438-2321

By stepping into Charlotte! Atelier-Boutique, you enter the world of Pascale Perron, an islander, artist, and textile designer.

Inspired by the river and supported by her studio team, Pascale has been creating a line of clothing, accessories, and jewelry for women and children for nearly 30 years. Men aren't left out, with a wide selection of sweatshirts, unisex T-shirts, and even a jewelry line just for them!

Her mission: to revive textiles from the past true treasures in her eyes. Catalogues, quilts, crochet, and forgotten embroidery are brought back to life in beautiful creations: cushions, tablecloths, soft toys, plant holders, lampshades, stationery, and wall art.

Before stepping inside, take a moment to browse the small vintage thrift corner and uncover hidden treasures. Inside, alongside the artist's work, you'll also find creations by Québec artisans, ceramicists, weavers, and illustrators.

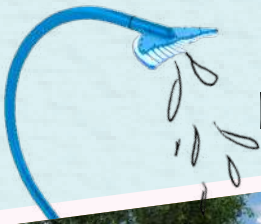

Take your time to look, to feel the textures, to choose a body care product from a lovely selection of Québec-made lines, and maybe even adopt a small plant. Sometimes, it's hard not to leave with everything!

Did you know?

The name Charlotte pays tribute to Charlotte Savard, one of the first children born on L'Isle-aux-Coudres in the early 1700s. A subtle nod to the Isle's history, woven into this colourful and creative atelier.

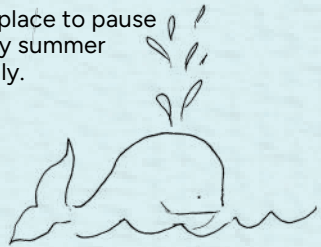

Let's cool off!

New this year, starting at the end of June: a splash pad for little ones is coming to L'Isle-aux-Coudres. Located in the municipal park, across from Parc de la Roche à Caya, it's the perfect spot to let kids play and cool off on hot summer days.

It's an easy stop, let the little ones run through the water while you take a moment to relax. Why not bring a picnic and make the most of it?

A lovely place to pause and enjoy summer as a family.

3D Project Plan!

tide schedule

On the Water, Gently

The island's scenery and rhythm make you want to enjoy the river... standing on a paddleboard, feet in the water. But here, the river sets the rules.

It's important to understand the tides, as they can quickly affect movement on the water. The wind can also pick up and become stronger than expected. Before heading out, take the time to check tide schedules and weather conditions, and make sure you can communicate if needed.

Even in summer, the water remains cold—so it's best to be prepared.

For a gentler and safer outing, the dock at Anse Saint-Louis is a great place to glide calmly across the water, standing on your board.

It's a lovely place to pick out a small gift or simply browse through the different sections of the shop. A year-round Christmas corner is set up for those who love decorating their tree with vacation memories.

A charming stop during your tour of the island!

Hélène Ferdais

ferdaismurales@hotmail.ca

A mural artist, Hélène Ferdais has chosen L'Isle-aux-Coudres as her home... and her creative space. Inspired by the river, the landscapes, and the people here, she creates works that blend naturally into the island.

You can spot her murals throughout the Isle, around a bend in the road or on the walls of certain businesses, including Cidrerie & Vergers Pedneault and Alimentation W. Boudreault. Her colourful creations tell their own story of the land and island life.

Taking the time to observe them is also a way of discovering the Isle differently, through the eyes of an artist who has left her mark here.

She also offers a range of products such as bags, placemats, license plates, puzzles, and colouring books, available by email order.

Les Moulins de L'Isle-aux-Coudres

21 lesmoulinsdelisleauxcoudres.com
418-760-1065

An iconic site of island heritage, the Moulins de L'Isle-aux-Coudres bear witness to a know-how passed down for nearly two centuries. Unique in Québec, the site features two mills still in operation: a windmill and a water mill, both run by the same miller who masters these two traditional crafts.

Within these history-filled buildings, grain grown on the island is transformed into artisanal flour, ground using stone millstones. This ancestral process produces high-quality local flour that visitors can purchase directly at the mill shop.

A visit also offers a chance to dive into the history and culture of L'Isle-aux-Coudres. Through the miller's demonstrations and the passionate guides' explanations, you'll discover how the mills operate and the important role they once played in the daily lives of island residents.

The Miller's House completes the experience by showcasing the traditions, customs, and way of life of the past. This interpretation space helps visitors better understand everyday life for island families when the mills were at the heart of the community.

Four permanent exhibitions further enrich the visit. Hommage à l'ouvrage highlights island traditions through the work of artist Alfred Desgagnés. Pour nourrir la mémoire d'un peuple explores various aspects of filmmaker Pierre Perrault's career, including the making of Pour la suite du monde, filmed on the Isle in the 1960s. The Mi-Carême exhibition brings to life this traditional celebration still observed on the Isle in winter. Finally, the recreated office of Pierre Perrault, nearly identical to the original, immerses visitors in his world as a writer.

Before continuing your journey, stop by the shop to discover artisanal flours, local handcrafted products, and much more. A must-see visit to experience a vibrant place where heritage, craftsmanship, and island culture come together.

New this year: massage therapy in the flower studio. In this peaceful space, surrounded by plants and dried bouquets, treat yourself to a moment of relaxation with a massage by reservation. A unique sensory experience inspired by nature and the island's gentle rhythm.

In Charlevoix, nearly 500 of these vessels were built along the shoreline, many of them right here, on the island. Far from conventional, the museum brings to life a historic shipyard dating back to 1946, along with the last preserved schooners in Québec. It's a vibrant site where visitors can step aboard four boats, take the captain's wheel, and experience the work of sailors and shipbuilders of the past. Exhibitions, immersive experiences, an escape game, trails, and aerial obstacle courses everything is designed to help you imagine life on the water in those days. Émilie's Seasons

It's well known, summer brings a vibrant energy to L'Isle-aux-Coudres. Days fill up with activities, shows, and encounters. We make the most of the season, and we cross paths with you here and there you who have chosen our little corner of paradise for your stay.

It's alive, it's moving, it feels like summer everywhere! Then autumn settles in. The pace slows gently. Colours begin to appear in the trees and stretch all the way to the mountains of Charlevoix. It's apple season: we fill our bags... then bake pies! We head out for walks, just a little more bundled up.

But one question keeps coming back:
What do Marsouins do in winter?

In winter, we breathe in the fresh air of the river.
We marvel at the light that fills the sky above the Isle.
We go snowmobiling, snowshoeing, cross-country skiing, fat biking.
We watch the ice canoe race, we play Picklit, we go bowling.
We grab coffee with friends. We chouenne without end.
We celebrate Mi-Carême, too! We keep an eye out for the return of the baker and his fresh bread delivered right to our door.
We send our kids outside to play, to slide down snowbanks
(yes, really snowbanks).
We make our way around the island, grateful for this place we call home.

That's what we do in winter, here on the Isle.

Located at Hôtel du Capitaine, the restaurant La Marjolaine offers a cuisine that evolves from morning to evening.

At breakfast, you'll find classics such as eggs Benedict, French toast, and eggs, along with fresh fruit and homemade products, as well as lighter options. Charlevoix products are well represented and we love it! In the evening, Chef Sébastien Larbre presents a cuisine inspired by the local terroir, where meats, fish, seafood, and pasta are featured in a menu that changes daily.

And on certain evenings, music joins the table with the talented Caroline and Marie-L'Éau, along with their guests.

Pâté croche

Here, pâté croche is deeply rooted. Every family has its own version, but everyone agrees on one thing: it's part of the Isle.

This small, golden half-moon pastry, filled with pork and veal, is baked all at once, creating a perfectly blended mix of flavours. Nothing complicated, but a whole lot of know-how! From one family to another, the recipe varies a little. Some make a scalded dough, others don't. There may be more or less onion, with or without potatoes. It changes and that's exactly how it should be.

Its origins lie somewhere between history and legend. Back when the island wasn't yet connected to the mainland by ferry, men had to cross the river by canoe to reach the north shore. At first, they would bring round pies, like the ones we know today. But after a crossing shaken by wind and waves, they often arrived... all crooked. The story goes that a canoeer once asked for a half-moon version better sealed, easier to hold with one hand, and simple to slip into the pocket of his shirt for the journey.

Others remember large families of the past, where these small portions were prepared so that everyone would have their own. They were served at special occasions such as weddings and baptisms, or as a starter rather than a main course. Sometimes, they were even tucked into Christmas stockings, alongside an orange. And between these two versions... everyone has their own, just like with the recipe. Both are good, anyway!

Today, pâté croche is still very much alive. It's still made, still shared, and remains part of what is passed down here, simply.

Boulangerie Bouchard

418-438-2454
 boulangeriebouchard.com

There are places you visit.
 And others you feel.

Since 1945, Boulangerie Bouchard has been part of the landscape of L'Isle-aux-Coudres. The same recipes, the same fire, the same passion. Here, things are done simply just as they always have been.

Generations of islanders have grown up with pâtés croches, warm bread, and golden brioche fresh out of the oven. Scents that leave a mark and become part of everyday life. Even today, the smell of fresh bread blends with the salty air of the river.

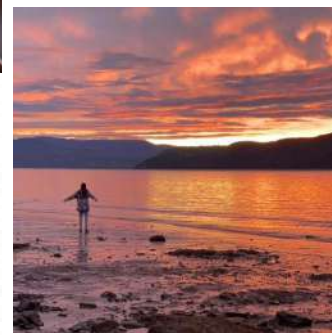

Recently, the business was taken over by a young local entrepreneur, Francis Boudreaultan islander with a deep love for the Isle. He carries on the work with care, keeping the spirit of the place very much alive. You stop in for fresh bread, a pâté croche, or something sweet. You'll also find delicious rillettes and a selection of local products to take home. It's the kind of place you walk into for one thing... and leave with a little more.

You can also enjoy lunch on-site, outside, with a beautiful view of the river.

*The brioche,
 the pâtés croches,
 the pies... When in doubt, take it all!*

Tell Me Your Isle

I went to meet the elementary and high school students of École Saint-Pierre. This year, I wanted to give them a place in the guide to express themselves.

Yes, for you, visitors, L'Isle-aux-Coudres is first and foremost about attractions, businesses, and landscapes. But for them, it's everyday life.

So I asked them a simple question: what is the Isle to you? Is it the home where you grew up? Tractor rides with your grandfather? There's no right answer... just tell me your Isle.

Here are a few of their answers.

In 2024, Marilyn Castonguay took the stage to receive the Gêmeaux Award for Best Leading Actress for the series C'est comme ça que je t'aime. She shared a line that still resonates: "I was just a little girl from L'Isle-aux-Coudres who allowed herself to dream as far as the horizon and as big as the St. Lawrence River."

We asked her to dive back into her memories her summers, her vacations, her Isle.

L'Isle-aux-Coudres

(par Marilyn Castonguay)

There is nothing more comforting to me than the view of the horizon from Cap-à-la-Branche... with the mountains of Le Massif de Petite-Rivière-Saint-François rising as high as the roots that anchor me to this island run deep.

My vacation memories here are so gentle, so simple, and so warm... When I close my eyes, all my senses bring me back to my life as an islander... it's the smell of low tide that rises as I ride around the island something I've done so often, always trying to beat my best time from the last ride...

It's the taste of the salty water in the pool at Hôtel Les Voitures d'Eau, mixed with the chicken guéville and cream soda enjoyed after a day under the blazing sun... It's the campfires along the shore at dusk, surrounded by friends some singing, some lost in the glow of the flames, others sharing the latest story of the day... It's laps and laps in the car with far too many people packed inside...

It's improvised baseball games between neighbours because there were just enough of us to form two teams...

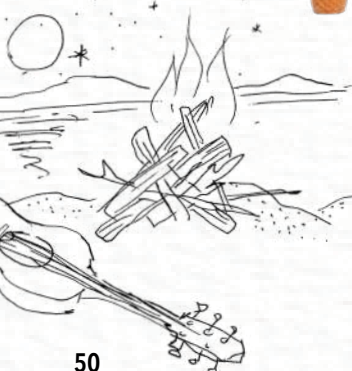

It's mud fights during long afternoons by the shoreline... and waiting for the tide to come back in to wash it all away...

Summer on L'Isle-aux-Coudres is about reconnecting with yourself, with others, with the elements around you...

It's about embracing life slowly... simply... and tasting happiness in its purest form with a good soft-serve ice cream... a happiness I rediscover every time I set foot there on a beautiful day in July :)
